The success of video and written implementation strategies for knowledge translation in nursing and allied health: a novel helix randomised study

Mitchell Sarkies, BAppSc (Phty)
PhD Candidate, Monash University
Mitchell.Sarkies@monash.edu

Coauthors:
A/Prof Stephen Maloney
Dr Mark Symmons
Prof Terry Haines
Background

My recruitment target
Helix counterbalanced design
Chapter 9: video vs written implementation strategies

<table>
<thead>
<tr>
<th>Health context</th>
<th>Implementation strategy</th>
<th>Control</th>
<th>Written</th>
<th>Video</th>
</tr>
</thead>
<tbody>
<tr>
<td>Bedside pressure sensor alarms to prevent falls</td>
<td>Control: 6/44 (14%)</td>
<td>Written: 8/38 (21%)</td>
<td>Video: 15/37 (39%)</td>
<td></td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Falls prevention education materials alone without follow-up from a health professional</td>
<td>Control: 10/37 (27%)</td>
<td>Written: 14/44 (32%)</td>
<td>Video: 18/38 (47%)</td>
<td></td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Physical activity as an adjunct treatment after diagnosis of deep vein thrombosis</td>
<td>Control: 26/38 (68%)</td>
<td>Written: 27/37 (73%)</td>
<td>Video: 31/44 (70%)</td>
<td></td>
</tr>
</tbody>
</table>